Recyclers, Haulers & Facilities in Ventura County (6/05/14)

Deconstruction: It's Really Just Construction in Reverse!

Deconstruction is a term broadly used to refer to the systematic dismantling and removal of valuable materials from buildings, as the value of wood, metals and other resources continues to climb, along with disposal costs in many areas, deconstruction-rather than demolition-has quickly grown in popularity.

Particularly with structures that contain valuable, reusable materials, such as old lumber, deconstruction is actually "construction in reverse." Crews begin the project on the roof removing shingles and work their way down to the floor.

Deconstruction companies have found that the value of the recovered materials, together with avoided disposal costs, can more than pay for the extra time deconstruction takes. Many nonprofit, job-training organizations are also looking at deconstruction as offering much needed employment opportunities.
